

Why Don't Bees Go to Heaven?

© 2008 Ronnie Williams (all rights reserved) it seems to me the species Homo sapiens, carries the chutzpah gene

to think they are the purpose of the universe when they only just arrived on the scene what's even worse, they bear a curse of believing they're the only form of life to never die, and go on living somewhere high up in the sky so why don't bees go to heaven? and trees go to heaven? amoeba, krill and fleas go to heaven?

it's not surprisin' that they're not arisin'
'cause man created god

this grain of sand upon an infinite beach had been supporting life for trillions of spins then along came humans, who started assumin' that this was where it begins so profoundly naïve, they began to believe these primates were the only ones to never die, and go on living
somewhere high up in the sky so why don't worms go to heaven? and germs go to heaven?

spiders, snakes and sperms go to heaven?
it's quite expected that they're not resurrected
'cause man created god

if man created Zeus, and the god of The Sun if man created Shiva, and the god of Abraham from all of life, why should the only one saved be the species worst behaved?

well, that's because that same species, Homo sapiens carries the chutzpah gene
to think they are the purpose of the universe
when they only just arrived on the scene

what's even worse, they bear a curse
of believing they're the only form of life
to never die, and go on living
somewhere high up in the sky so why don't whales go to heaven? and snails go to heaven?

orang-utans and quail go to heaven? they don't think twice about paradise because man created god so why don't bees go to heaven? (etc.)